

From: Tony Stojanovski <TonyStoj@comcast.net>
To: <MCSF@courts.mi.gov>
Date: Fri, May 2, 2003 9:41 AM Subject: child support

child support should be base on the shared economic plan if some one has there child 52 over nights.

if you have your child 52 overnights or 100 over nights your coast is the same. you still provide the child with all the same items as the other parent. the only different is the food.

the parent that pays the support also has more expenses.
the cost of picking up and dropping off the child, more money for entertainment, and food. and all that is already played in the child support.

the worst part of child support the other parent will not give you the child no extra time because they might lose some money.

children should not have dollar sing on there head.

the currant child support dollar are way to high. both parents work today.